

Dear Friend,

Thank you for the interest you have expressed in Hampton Court, Herefordshire. It is truly a unique place that provides a rare opportunity to relax, unwind, meditate, or focus on the task at hand. It has become a marvelous location to hold small conferences, seminars, retreats, receptions, or board meetings.

Hampton Court, built in the 1430s, rests on a scenic 1000-acre estate. The feel of daily life throughout the centuries is evoked as you walk through this beautifully restored facility and its grounds.

The newly built and restored gardens have incorporated all the best of English garden design through the ages. We are proud to have had the Van Kampen Gardens featured in The Royal Horticultural Society's magazine The Garden as well as in other prominent English publications.

Whether you find solace in wandering the vast lawns and gardens with their ancient trees or renewal in walking through the majestic halls complete with armor and pennants of years gone by, the courteous and helpful staff at Hampton Court are anxious to make your stay a memorable and productive one.

We welcome the opportunity to work with you to make your next meeting or conference an overwhelming success.

Kindest Regards,

A UNIQUE AND INSPIRATIONAL CONFERENCE CENTER

“Hampton Court is an ancient stately home now gloriously restored for hospitality, beauty, and biblical study. Staying and working there, as I can testify, is a wonderful experience.”

Dr. J. I. Packer, Regent College

Hampton Court Herefordshire is set in tranquil surroundings on the meadows of the River Lugg, between Hereford and Leominster in western England. It is a castle-like manor house bound on three sides by rivers with the north approach guarded by the massive Gatehouse, bristling with battlements. Once the home of King Henry IV, the estate is steeped in history.

Hampton Court rests on 1000 acres, surrounded by private lawns and gardens, a haven from the outside world. Recently refurbished in its entirety, Hampton Court provides a unique and inspirational venue for conferences, seminars, and meetings.
